Outdoor learning: adventure and fieldwork

Who we are

Our mission is to create outstanding opportunities for everyone to learn about and connect with the natural environment and be passionate about preserving its future.

Field Studies Council is an environmental education charity based in the UK. We have a proud 80-year history and are best known for providing field trips for those studying biology, geography and environmental science.

We do this through fieldwork and outdoor learning courses tailored to specific curriculum or syllabus requirements. These are delivered by our expert and experienced tutor teams, based at our centres.

Then there are the hidden benefits of outdoor learning and challenge activities that promote personal development, support resilience, build relationships and are just good fun!

What we offer for Secondary

- A range of fieldwork and outdoor activities explicitly linked to key curriculum content.
- Adventure activities that build social capital – confidence, communication, teamwork, co-ordination, physicality

What we offer for Secondary

- KS3 – Geography, Biology, History, Activity
- KS4 – Geography, Science, Activity
- KS5 – Biology, Geography skills/NEA
